

HOLOCAUST THOUGHTS

[ tomorrow is holocaust day here in Israel....being the son a mother who lived miraculously through 2 years of Aushwitz and being a child born without grandparents --all victims of the Shoah....i was never really able or willing to grasp it's unspeakable reality...as of late I am discovering an inner voice --of poetry ---perhaps poetry can help me to try to speak about the unspeakable...]

a scream in the middle of the night another soul leaving her body's tortured cage rage fades into numbness pain will never have the same meaning skeleton eyes sunk into lifeless sighs why? please tell me why life and death the thin line separating them disappears survival becomes the only option

Gd ---some refused to see You anymore ---some couldn't possibly see how they could live without You

Israel young soldiers with guns and young scholars with Holy Books all with smiling eyes reassuring all of us never again people how can they do it to other people?! this --I will never know nor do I want to
